171 CECCO D'ASCOLI (Francesco Stabili) ACERBA, Poema in terza rima, manuscript of the fifteenth century in an Italian hand, stained 138 pp. folio. XV CENT.

Cecco was born at Ascoli in the thirteenth century. As Professor of Astrology at Bologna his work was denounced by the Inquisition, and he only escaped by recanting what was offensive, though he was subsequently accused at Florence and condemned to be burnt. Charles Duke of Calabria appointed him his astrologer, and consulted him on the future conduct of his wife and daughter. Cecco foretold that they would turn out very abandoned characters, and thus he lost the favour of the duke. The loss of his friend would not have brought him to the stake if he had not rendered himself unpopular by attacking the literary merit of Dante and Cavalcanti in the present poem. He thus incurred the hostility of Dino del Garbo, who never rested until he had compassed his death. The present manuscript, which varies considerably from other copies of the poem, ends: "Explicit Acerba Vita S. Cecchi, Notarii Exculani, factum fuit ann. 1376 die XIo Settembris in Eugubio. Ego Johannes Ghabbriellis de Florencia scripsi."

Nicolas was entrusted by the famous Joan I Queen of Naples with the education of Louis Prince of Taranto, whom she subsequently married, as well as with the administration of the Kingdom of Naples. This most faithful minister was forced to leave the kingdom at the time the Queen was driven from her dominions by Louis King of Hungary, but was instrumental in obtaining her restoration in 1355. 381 FLORENCE. STATUTA UNIVERSITATIS MERCATORUM ET MERCANTIE CIVITATIS ET PROVINCIE FLORENTINE, titles in red 376 pp. folio. XV CENT.

 A fine manuscript of the old Florentine Statutes with curiously grotesque initials. The Florentines, so early as the year 1282, had classed themselves into distinct bodies or municipal companies according to their various professions; and, in order to place their government on a truly popular foundation, had determined, that no person should be eligible to a public office, unless he were either actually, or professedly, a member of one or other of these companies. By this regulation, the nobility were either excluded from the offices of the State, or in order to obtain them, were obliged to degrade the honours of their rank by the humiliating appellation of artizan. See Roscoe, also Hallam's "Middle Ages," who corrects Roscoe. The laws were revised by deputies from the different companies in 1393, and remained in force till the times of the Medici.

382 FLORENCE. Regolamento per la Casa di Correzione 107 pp. folio. 1786

 These are the original papers sent to John Howard, the philanthropist and prison reformer, relative to prison discipline in Florence. At the beginning of the volume is an autograph letter of Horace Mann's to Howard, dated Florence, Apr. 14, 1786, in which among other things he says:

The Great Duke was most graciously pleased to comply with my request to give orders to the Director of the House of Correction lately established here to communicate the Rules of it to me for your use, they have not been printed nor will be, etc.

Horace Mann was British Envoy at Florence, and a friend of Horace Walpole's.

It was unknown to the editors of Dugdale's "Monasticon," and Oliver, editor of the "Monasticon Exoniensis." The origin of this fine Cistercian Abbey was as follows: Richard de Brioniis in 1136 brought an abbot and twelve Cistercian monks from Waverley to Brightley. On his death they determined to return there, and had travelled as far as Thorncombe, when Adelicia, the heiress of her brother Richard, intervened, and gave them Thorncombe with the principal mansion called Ford. The charters in the present volume relate entirely to the lands belonging to the Abbey in the Counties of Devon, Dorset and Somerset.

 Eleven letters and three poems in the autograph of the celebrated Paganino Gaudenzio addressed to Gabriel Naudé the famous bibliographer, librarian at different times to Cardinals Bagni, Barberini and Mazarin, and to the Queen of Sweden. Gaudenzio was Professor of Belles Lettres at Pisa, and on the most intimate terms with the Grand Duke Ferdinand II, who often invited him to his table, and found great delight in listening to the flood of erudition he poured out on any subject which could be started. roy. folio. XV CENT.

 This magnificently preserved manuscript is written on the purest vellum, with the capital letters throughout the volume richly painted in colours and heightened with gold. The first page is surrounded by a very fine border, composed of flowers and fruit beautifully illuminated in gold and colours. The "Brocard" and the "Tractatus," forming the second and third parts of the entire work, have similar borders but only in the lower margin. The first two parts are taken from well-known works, but as there are great variations between the different manuscripts of Brocardus, the present one ought to be compared with other copies of the same work. The last Treatise is very curious and contains sixty-one chapters, of which an index precedes the work; it contains much information relating to Great Britain; in the chapter "De Transformatis," the unknown author treats of werwolfs and ghosts, and in subsequent pages of persons with goitres, giants and giantesses, pigmies, Cyclops and other monstrosities. Besides a description of England, Scotland and Ireland, there is much curious information mense Maii anno regni Regis Henrici Octavi Septimo et anno Domini Ricardi Beere, Abbatis, XXIIº, coram Fratre Thoma Suttone, Cellerario forinsico, per sacramentum et fidelitatem Thome Boddone, Ballivi et prepositi ibidem, Johannis Baker, Thome Gyet, Thome Seywell, Roberti Rode, Willelmi Walter, et omnium aliorum Tenencium Domini ibidem, ad idem terrarium vocatorum et distincte examinatorum propter specialem perambulacionem et mensuracionem factam ibidem atque probatam." The Manors included in the volume are Strete, Walton, Aysshcote, Shapewyke, Hamme, Greyngton, Murylinche, Withyes, Weston, Middelsowy, Othery, Middleton, Uplyme, Sevyngton or Sevynhampton Denyes, and the perambulacio appears to have taken from Feb. 6 Henry VIII to September 8 Henry VIII. The following extract from the "History of Glastonbury" shows how the Work came into existence:

"Richard Beere busied himself in adding to the Monastery such buildings as were deemed necessary to its high character and almost unique perfection; and ended his improvements by executing a great and important work—the examination of all the muniments in the Abbey Exchequer; a perambulation and actual inspection of the Twelve Hides; and the formation (from the comparison of both) of a new Terrier of the possessions of Glaston Abbey. It was in the year 1503 that Richard Beere undertook this arduous labour; and, that he might effect it with the greatest possible accuracy, he summoned to his assistance his "most devoted and faithful counsellor" John FitzJames, seneschal of the town of Glastonbury, William Lange, auditor and clerk of the Stewards, and Thomas Gunwyn, a cleric deeply versed in the Abbey archives. To these was committed chiefly, the research among the muniments; but for the actual survey of the property, and the settlement of the Terrier, he engaged John Horner, a prudent man and able surveyor, Thos. Somersett, and Wm. Walton, clerks of the Abbey Exchequer, and Thomas Sutton, a monk and cellarius of the Monastery, who drew up the Terrier from the particulars obtained as well as the preface to it."

Abbot Beere added largely to the Abbey. He built the New Lodgings for secular priests, the greater part of the Edgar Chapel, arched the east end, strengthened the steeple, made a rich altar of silver-gilt, made a chapel of Our Lady of Loretto, a chapel of the Sepulchre, and an almshouse in the north part of the Abbey, etc. Attached to the first leaf of the portion of the volume relating to Greyngton is an autograph letter of Ric. Huntswell, dated London, 21 of Julye, 38 RR. Henr. VIII, addressed to Sir Thos. Speke, High Steward of Glastonbury, and Sir Hugh Pawlett Knyght, Surveyor of the same, directing them to hand over all the evidences of the Manor of Greyngton to Thos. Dyer, who had purchased it from K. Henry VIII. The volume was at one time in the possession of Lord Rolle at Bicton.

created a Cardinal by Alexander VIII in 1690, and was Treasurer-General of the Apostolic Chamber. On the death of Clement XII, he wanted but one vote to ensure him the Papal throne, when Card. 592 JACOPONE DA TODI POESIE, manuscript of the fifteenth century written in an Italian hand, ON VELLUM, with titles and capitals in red, vellum 318 pp. 8*vo.* XV CENT.

 Manuscripts containing these sacred Cantici, in which a Saint of the Roman Church inveighed so much against the Pope, who had him imprisoned for many years, are rare. This volume has never been collated and varies considerably from the Venetian edition of 1617. The following instance, taken from one of his most celebrated Laudi in which he relates the hardships he suffered in prison, shows the variations :

 The extreme rarity of manuscripts of Lucretius is such that Haenel found only four in all his literary journeys; that very few could be found by Valpy throughout England, all but one of the fifteenth century or later date, nor are any mentioned in the printed catalogues of the celebrated libraries of Ravenna, Turin, St. Marks, Venice, etc., and the Imperial Library of Vienna only possessed one, and that of the fifteenth century. 666 MALASPINA. ALBERO GENTILIZZIO DELLA FAMIGLIA MALASPINA ragionato, with pedigree folio

 Containing the genealogy and history of this noble Tuscan family from A.D. 813 to 1765, verified by charters, deeds and investitures, which are given at length.  This very important manuscript is referred to by Hardy in his "Catalogue of Materials relating to the History of Great Britain," etc. (Rolls Series) as follows: "This is the only MS. with the exception of Bibl. Reg. 13 D. II, that contains the latest corrections of the author in both the 'Gesta Regum' and the 'Historia Novella.' It is not however a transcript of that MS. as in some important words it agrees with other MSS. It is undoubtedly a transcript from the author's autograph, and the variations between these two MSS. arise from two different scribes having misread the original. In proof that it was not copied from 13 D. II, it may be stated that it has a very long paragraph omitted by mistake in that MS. and at the end of the 'Historia Novella' it has the readings of the last as well as the former edition run into one, as if the scribe did not understand the author's correction." The volume was, in 1635, in the possession of Sir Roger Twysden, the historian, and subsequently in the Sebright and Heber collections.

MONCK MASON'S IRISH MANUSCRIPTS.

WILLIAM MONCK MASON, born in 1775, succeeded in 1796 to a post, previously held by his father, in the Revenue Department in Dublin. From his youth he devoted himself to historical research, mainly in relation to the History and Topography of Ireland. His idea was to produce a work similar in character to the "Magna Britannia" of Lysons. The intended title was "Hibernia Antiqua et Hodierna, being a topographical account of Ireland and a history of all the Establishments in that Kingdom, Ecclesiastical, Civil and Monastic, drawn chiefly from sources of original record." A first portion was issued in 1819, entitled "The History and Antiquities of the Collegiate and Cathedral Church of St. Patrick, Dublin." He continued his plan by commencing a companion volume—included among the following MSS. and never published—on Christ Church, Dublin. On the abolition of his office in 1826 Mason was granted a pension, and, after travelling on the Continent for a time, thenceforward devoted himself to the collection of books and philological research. The undermentioned lots comprise the greater part of his collections for the history and topography of Ireland.

 From some Rhenish monastery, and in the dialect of Guelders, Cleves or Juliers. It was written by a monk for a lady. It ends "Finitus est liber per me N. Kratz feria sexta in festo Sancti Joh. Baptiste, anno Domini 1434."

302 pp. 8*vo.* XV CENT.

 Written in Low German, it begins: "Sante Johannes de Ewangeliste scrivet in den boken der ewygher wysheit hemeliken openbarunghe," etc. The monastery from which the volume came is inscribed at the foot of a leaf as follows: "Item dyt boeck hoert den Susteren zu Marienberge in Franckenberg."  This extremely valuable manuscript, apparently written by an English or Anglo-Saxon scribe, is in rather large characters. It has never been collated, and was quite unknown to Hardy, compiler of the Catalogue of Materials for the History of Great Britain (Rolls' Series), and according to him only one other manuscript of this Life of St. Neot appears to be known, and in that manuscript the Rubric of the Prologue calls him "Sancti Neoti, Presbyteri et Confessoris," whereas the present manuscript calls him "Neoti Abatis Gloriosi Confessoris." Following the "Vita" is a letter of Abbo Floriacensis relative to the life of St. Edmund, and added at the beginning of the volume are some Festivitates by another writer. The "Bedæ Historia" contains a number of valuable various readings which have never been made use of. In this manuscript a paragraph beginning "Præterea omnes ad quos" appears at the end of the volume, whereas in the editions it is found at the end of the "Prologus."

800 PASCHINO. SORTE TRATTE DEL BREVIARIO DI MAISTRO PASCHINO LA NOTTE DI LA EPIPHANIA DEL 1535 fol. XVI CENT.

 A very clever specimen of this witty rogue's satire. The Sortes are very numerous, and supposed to be drawn from the Breviary by all the States, Princes and most eminent persons of the time. Those drawn by Paul III, the French King, the Roman People, Pasquin himself, etc. are particularly appropriate and severe. That of Henry VIII is "apprehenderunt VII mulieres virum unum in die illa," of Card. Campegio "sicut novelle olivarum, filii tui in circuitu mensæ tuæ." Probably these have not been printed and it is well-known what effect the Pasquinades had on the opinions of the times.

801 PECOCK. YE BOOK Y CALLID YE REULE OF CRYSTEN RELIGIOUN, MANUSCRIPT OF THE FIFTEENTH CENTURY, BEAUTIFULLY WRITTEN IN OLD ENGLISH, ON VELLUM, calf gilt 384 pp. folio. XV CENT.

 THIS IS THE UNIQUE, UNPUBLISHED, AND PROBABLY AUTOGRAPH MANUSCRIPT OF THE ABOVE WORK BY BISHOP PECOCK. From what he says in the 12th chapter of part IV it appears to have been written in 1443. It is divided into five parts. Reginald Pecock, a Welshman by birth, Fellow of Oriel College, Oxford, Master of Whittington College, London, appointed Bishop of St. Asaph in 1444, and translated to Chichester in 1450, was one of the most eminent and learned divines who immediately succeeded Wiclif, of whose opinions Lewis, his biographer, styles Pecock, "a candid and moderate opposer." He was long protected by Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, after whose death he was accused of heresy before Card. Bourchier, Abp. of Canterbury, Wm. of Waynflete, Bp. of Winchester, and by them was at length deprived of his bishoprick, and, though he publicly recanted, he was confined for life in Thorney Abbey. Pecock strenuously opposed Wiclif's doctrines, but he deprecated the use of any other weapon than argument, and this, with his rejection of the doctrine of the infallibility of the Church and of the article added to the creed of Christ's descent into hell, were his principal crimes; unless, we add that most of his books were composed in English and contained translations of the Scripture from Latin into English, "contrary to the ecclesiastical prohibitions and the decrees of the Holy Fathers"; meaning, contrary to the constitution of Abp. Arundel against the translation of the Scriptures, which was intended as a net to catch whomsoever the ruling clergy did not like. In this manuscript the author gives his reasons why this and his other works were written in English, and has much to say on the subject of prayer being in the mother tongue. Bp. Pecock's books were condemned to be burned at St. Paul's, and the University of Oxford on their part anticipated this sentence, as before it had been adjudged, they collected all the copies that could be found at Oxford and burned them at Quatervoix (Carfax). This circumstance, and the Bishop's own disinclination to have his works copied, may in some degree account for their excessive rarity. In those of his writings still extant in MS. he complains of their being copied by the indiscretion of his friends, before he had revised them; and in his work called the "Donet" he states "that his former and larger treatise had been run abroad, and copied against his will and intent, as he had openly preached at St. Paul's." Of the great interest of this manuscript little need be said. Though not a Reformer, yet, by his writing in the English language, Bishop Pecock awakened the attention of the laity to subjects before carefully concealed from them, and he thus widened not a little the breach which Wiclif had made. He was also one of the first who contended against the infallibility of the Romish Church, and in favour of the Scriptures as our principal guide. So identified is he with the great change of opinions at that time, that Lewis very properly styles his life "A Sequel to that of Wiclif." In Babington's Edition (Rolls Series) of Pecock's "Repressor" is a long account of Pecock's life and works; particular mention is made of this unique manuscript, which Babington was unfortunately unable to consult owing to its having been temporarily mislaid by Sir Thos. Phillipps.

851 POETRY. A RECOLLECTION OF CERTAINE SCATTERED POEMS, WRITTEN LONG SINCE BY AN UNDERGRADUATE, BEING ONE OF THE STUDENTS OF CHRIST CHURCH IN OXFORD, AND NOW IN THE YEARE 1644, TRANSCRIBED BY THE AUTHOR, AND DEDICATED TO HIS WIFE, calf folio. 1644

 This is the original manuscript of poems of Nicholas Oldisworth. The dedication "to his deare wife Marie Oldisworth" is signed and dated "from Willington, Feb. 17, 1644," at the time of the Treaty of Uxbridge. He addresses her as "Sweet Mall," and intimates: "Wee two have now beene marryed five yeares. Time was, Mall, when tabrets and pipes were more respected then drummes and trumpets: which drummes and trumpets were seldome heard in England, but at a Masque or at a Play. Time was when I could ride from Borton to London, both without companie, and without danger, and carry my pockets full of monie. But now where is that monie? My gold scales (thou knowest) lie useless and unemployed, nor doe I see my Soveraigne's face in silver at home much oftener then I see his face in flesh and blood at Oxford. Yet have I spent as much in contributions and free quarters, as would not onely sett mee out of debt, but have begunne competent portions for thy two litle daughters." The verses commence with "A Letter to Ben Jonson, 1629," beginning:

Die Johnson; crosse not our religion so,
As to bee thought immortall. Lett us know
Thou art a man. Thy workes make us mistake
Thy person, and thy great Creations make Us idol thee, and 'cause wee see thee doe
Eternall things, thinke Thee eternall too, etc.

These are followed by:

"To his friend beyond the Sea." These verses, he says, were written in 1629 to Mr. Ric. Bacon, a hopefull youth, a scholar of Westminster, who died while travelling—"On seeing the Study of Mr. Michael Oldisworth," who was a Fellow of Magdalen Coll. Oxford, and Secretary to William and Philip, Earls of Pembroke—"On Compliments." These verses, he says, were given to a Courtier in 1630—"To the R^{t} Hon. the Lord Haies Earle of Carlile," his patron—"On His Majesty's recovery from the smallpocks, Dec. 1632." He mentions that these verses were presented to the King by Mr. Osbolston, Prebend of Westminster—"On a Seale of Gold and Pearles sent him for a token by Mr. Michael Oldisworth"—"In defence of a girl that went holding downe her head"—"The wordes of a lover, speaking to the reflection of his mistresses face in a looking glass." These, he says, were made for Mr. Chandler, of Coln Rogers, when hee was a suitor to her, who now is his wife—"To the University of Cambridge, 1631." A eulogium of considerable length to the memory of Richard Bacon, of Trinity College. Bacon acted a woman's part in some play before the King, and Oldisworth makes him out a second Crichton—"To Sir Edw. Hungerford of Cosham." He says "for these verses I was largely rewarded with money"—"To M^{ris} E. W." These verses were made for M^{ris} K. B. who was at enmity with M^{ris} E. W.—"On Heraldry," in which allusion is made to Archibald the King's jester—"On an ugly wench." Oldisworth describes her as "Mine Hostesse, she's the Queen of Sluts," and has given full vent to his licentia poetica—"On Mris Katharine Bacon"—"Stateswomen." "This I translated Dec. 1631, by the appointment of Dr. Duppa our Deane of Christ Church"—"On Abraham Cowley, the young poet laureat"—"To the Witts of Oxford, Cambridge and London"—To the Worshipfull Mris Strange, of Summerford, a Poetesse"—"On the birth of James Duke of Yorke." These verses, he says, were printed at Oxford—"Iter Australe, 1632, or a journey southwards." The commencement of this journey alludes to a machine which has been noticed by Chapman in his "Worlde runnes upon Wheeles," and by Taylor, the water poet. The notice in this poem of his interview with Ben Jonson will be perused with interest as confirmatory of the growling discontent with which he is charged by his contemporaries:

Behind the Abbey lives a man of fame
With awe and reverence wee repeat his name—
BEN JOHNSON: him wee saw, and thought to heare
From him some flashes and fantastique guere;
But hee spake nothing lesse. His whole discourse
Was how mankinde grew daily worse and worse,
How God was disregarded, how men went
Downe even to Hell, and never did repent,
With many such sadd tales, as hee would teach
Us scholars, how herafter wee should preach.
Great wearer of the baies, looke to thy lines,
Lest they chance to bee challeng'd by Divines:
Sure future times will, by a grosse mistake,
JOHNSON, a Bishop, not a Poet make.

Ben Jonson died in 1637, and was buried at Westminster, near which, according to this poem, he would seem to have latterly resided. The volume contains a great many other extremely interesting poems.

Nous présumons qu'elle aurait un grand succez si on avait à l'opéra des acteurs comme on y a des chanteurs. . . . . Nous ne parlerions pas si hardiment à tout autre que vous. Nous vous disons ce que nous croions la vérité parceque vous méritez qu'on vous la dise. . . .

1090 WIGMORE. CHRONICON DE WIGMORE AB ANNO 1066 AD ANNUM 1306—CHRONICON ANGLIE AD ANNUM 1437, manuscripts of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, ON VELLUM, russia folio. XIV-XV CENT.

 The Chronicle of Wigmore fills the first sixteen pages. The present manuscript is the only one entered in the "Catalogue of Materials relating to the History of Great Britain" (Rolls series) under the head of "Chronicon de Wigmore." As it contains particulars relating to Wigmore and the Mortimers not apparently to be found in any other manuscript, it appears to be unique. The "Cat. of Mat." says: "In addition to the general events, it has a list of the Abbots of Wigmore and descents of the family of Mortimer, and sometimes their connections, inserted chronologically, with various notices of events connected with the Marches of Wales." The second "Chronicon" begins with the first inhabitants of Britain, and ends in 1437. It is finely written, in a different hand from the Wigmore Chronicle, and extends to one hundred and ten pages.
